BYRD OYSTER BILL CAUSES DEADLOCK (Continued from Page One.) ment, he said, is based on that immortal truth written by Gerge Mason "that the legislative, executive and judicial departments should be separate and independent." It is in his view improper to put the taxing power in the hands of any but the General Assembly. Not Clear to People. BYRD OYSTER BILL

Intion it might be possible some day for the State to force the Richmond. Fredericksburg and Potomac to surrender its charter rights and to pay taxes in return for the protection of the State.

Attention was called to the fact that while the road demands its exemption it does not comply with its charter provisions in other respects.

At a short hearing held in the afternoon by the Senate and House Committees on General Laws, it was unanimously decided to report favorably the proposed amendment to the Constitution allowing future Legislaturest o provide for commission forms of government by cities, upon demand of the citizens of the communities affected. There was no opposition to this action.

State is weak so far as this charter is concerned, but not so weak as that. "This amendment," he said, "may not do any actual good, but it will show the road what the people of Virginia, through their representatives, think of its position."

Mr. Powers favored the amendment. He thought this a good time to deal with the question.

If the amendment were not adopted, said Mr. Johnson, of Russell, he would yote against the bill.

Amendment Carries.

The previous question was called, but was lost by a vote of 33 to 44. The pending question was then ordered. The vote on the amendment resulted: Ayes, 57; noes, 18.

The question being then on the passage of the bill as amended, Mr. West, of Nansemond, argued strongly against the spirit of Sabbath desecration. He asked what would become of the other men who would be required to work for the railroads on Sunday, while the train men could reach their homes.

Mr. Jennings moved to pass the bill by. He thought the House had not thought sufficiently on the subject.
